Stavroula Gavridi

Associate

I'm an associate in Fox Williams' Financial Services team, specialising in secured and unsecured financing transactions across a range of lending structures.

Stavroula Gavridi is an associate in the Financial Services team at Fox Williams. She advises borrowers, banks, alternative lenders, private credit providers, fintechs and other financial institutions on a broad range of secured financing transactions. She has a particular focus on structured finance and advises clients on the structuring, negotiation and execution of complex financing transactions.

Stavroula is dually qualified in England and Wales and Greece. Her international legal background gives her a broad perspective on financing transactions involving multiple jurisdictions. Before joining Fox Williams, she gained experience at both national and international law firms, as well as in-house with a specialist debt provider. Having worked across both private practice and an in-house legal function, she brings a commercial perspective to transactions and a practical understanding of the objectives and challenges facing market participants.

Prior to specialising in structured finance, Stavroula developed extensive experience acting for lenders on real estate finance and acquisition finance transactions. This lender-side background continues to inform her approach to complex financing structures, while her current practice encompasses advising both borrowers and lenders across a broad range of financing transactions. Her combined experience enables her to anticipate the priorities of all parties and deliver commercially focused, pragmatic advice.
